Mrs. J. M. Sanders, who has been visiting her sons, John G. and Carl E. Sanders, at Garretson, South Dakota, for three weeks and a half, returned home Wednesday, and the editor is enjoying good square meals once more.

E. J. Maxwell is still suffering severely from the effects of the runaway accident he was in last week. His left leg was badly bruised and wrenched, and he could hardly walk for a few days, but is about over that, but his right shoulder still causes him great pain. The doctor says the muscles are badly torn and it will take some time for them to heal.

Dan Bennett had a little accident while moving last Saturday. He had the cook stove and a tub full of dishes in the wagon, when the horses got frightened at something and started to run. Carl ran and got hold of one horse's bridle, but not before the wagon was upset. However, the dishes were not broken and not a great deal of damage done to the stove, although it was broken in two or three places.

Friday evening A. R. McCandless brought a stalk of corn with two large well developed ears of corn on it. While he will not guarantee that every stalk has two ears on, he says lots of them have. This was from the farm at McCandless Siding, and was raised by Arch Handley. Mr. McCandless has over 250 acres in corn this year, and it is all good. If nothing happens he will sure have some corn this year.

Cable Ferry Demolished.

Last Friday the government snag boat J. B. McPherson went down the river. When they got to the former village of Hillsdale, instead of going down the main channel of the river, they went down the "chute" between the island and the main land on the west, and ran into John H. Moorehead's cable ferry that runs to the island, demolishing the boat and tearing the cable down. The boat was at the west bank and a wagon loaded with corn had just driven off it. The steamboat apparently made no effort to avoid the ferry. This will be a serious inconvenience, as a corn sheller was on the island shelling corn, which was being hauled over on the cable ferry and then to market. Apparently the pilot of the steamboat believes cable ferries have no rights that a steamboat is bound to respect.
